Board Notes September 11, 2015

Executive Director Thoughts: Today is a special day as we remember September 11, 2001. Now named a National Day of Service and Remembrance, individuals are asked to honor the victims, survivors and their families by volunteering. While many of us cannot volunteer or serve today, try pledging one good deed on 9/11. You can go to www.911day.org to give your pledge.

I am excited to share information on our latest Professional Development opportunity, the Human Capital Leadership Summit scheduled for December 3-4 in Monterey, CA! The Human Capital Leadership Summit is designed for school leaders who are past their first three years of HR management and who are looking for the next level of professional development in HR leadership. Sessions will be dedicated to helping participants grow professionally in their knowledge as well as personally in their leadership skills. Sessions will be longer and more in depth than those provided at our Boot Camps. Our keynote presenter will be Elizabeth Arons, Chief Executive Officer of the Urban Schools Human Capital Academy. Her keynote will highlight the overview of human capital management in public school systems across the country and will focus on the connection of Human Resources functions to best support strategic human capital. Included in the session will be: what constitutes the “right” work - strategic work - and how HR can strongly support principals through that work; the important role of data in HC work; what’s working nation-wide to improve the quality of the workforce; and how best to overcome obstacles in serving principals as human capital managers. Are You Predisposed to Success? - These 6 ‘genes’ make up the DNA of successful people.

DNA is the source code that determines who we are—it’s what makes us, us. So is there a “DNA” to top achievers? Is there a common “gene” that successful people all have? If we could get to their DNA, there are things that would be at the core and fiber of all their beings. These are the genes we would find, the qualities successful people share:

1. They have a predisposition to setting high, lofty goals.
2. They have an ability to focus intently on reaching those goals.
3. They have the willingness to sacrifice to succeed.
4. They have tenacity.
5. They have a heightened self-awareness.
6. They have a desire to help others achieve, too.

Your real DNA? You’re stuck with it. The good news about this DNA is that you can go out and work on it. You can get better. You can be successful. You can be a top achiever. For more information go to <http://news.pcma.org/articles/827517/are-you-predisposed-to-success/>
